Ammembal Subba Rao Pai was a visionary whose charitable enthusiasm still has a profound impact on the lives of many people. He was a lawyer and a banker by trade, as well as an educator and social reformer by temperament.

Ammembal Subba Rao Pai, the fourth child of lawyer Upendra Pai, was born in Mulki, Dakshina Kannada district, on November 19, 1852. With the foresight of social development, he founded Canara High School in the year 1891 which is the century-old precursor of the many Canara Educational Institutions that we see in the present day.

He not only placed great emphasis on education, but also held that a strong society is one in which its members have access to the information and resources necessary to manage and make decisions about their finances. In order to enable the people to mobilize their own resources for self-help, he founded the Canara Hindu Permanent Fund in 1906, which is now known as Canara Bank, one of India's top banks

The seeds that our founder sowed more than a century ago have grown into a huge tree that provides the community with shelter in the form of educational opportunities, employment opportunities, and financial support, thereby fostering the welfare, prosperity, and growth of the community. With the merger of Vikas Educational Institutions and the Canara Group of Institutions, we are certain to uphold his legacy.
